Overview of the NDIS (National Disability Insurance Scheme)

The NDIS is a support system designed to provide funding for Australians with a disability to achieve greater independence, participate more fully in society, and access necessary services. It is governed by specific laws and agencies that define its scope, rules, and operations.

1. NDIS Act 2013: This legislation sets the legal framework for the NDIS, outlining eligibility criteria, the rights of participants, and the responsibilities of service providers.

2. NDIA: The National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA) is responsible for managing the NDIS. This includes the development and implementation of individual support plans for participants, as well as the allocation and management of funds.

3. NDIS Commission: The NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission ensures the safety, quality, and integrity of services provided under the NDIS. It establishes compliance standards for service providers, including the accuracy of claims and invoices.

NDIS Plan and Fund Management

Participants' NDIS plans dictate how invoices are handled. Each participant can choose one of three ways to manage their NDIS plan:

Agency Managed (NDIA)

- NDIA directly manages the participant's funds and processes claims on behalf of the participant.

Self-Managed:

- The participant manages their own NDIS funding and processes invoices themselves.
- Invoices in this case should be directed to the participant for payment.

Plan Managed:

- A plan manager (e.g., Maple Plan, CPM) is appointed to handle the participant's funds.

NDIS Fund Allocation Categories

Participants' budgets are divided into three key support categories, each with distinct invoicing requirements:

1. CORE Supports:

Invoicing Tip : CORE support funding is often flexible, allowing participants to move funds between subcategories. Ensure that invoiced services align with daily living assistance.

2. CAPITAL Supports:

This includes investments in assistive technologies (e.g., wheelchairs, hearing aids), home modifications, or Specialist Disability Accommodation (SDA).

Invoicing Tip: CAPITAL supports are non-flexible. Invoices must be precise, with clear descriptions of the equipment or modifications, ensuring that these align with the approved budget.

3. CAPACITY BUILDING Supports:

These supports help participants build independence and skills, such as support coordination, employment assistance, and health programs.

Invoicing Tip: These funds are goal-oriented and allocated to specific programs. Ensure that invoices reflect the services contributing to the participant's capacity development.

Plan Period: NDIS plans are funded for a specific period, and invoices should only be processed for services rendered within that time frame. Be aware of plan renewal dates to ensure accurate invoicing.
